Edmund has been banished to the dead world of Narnia in the present and Lucy has been to Narnia in the past, and they have only just met again in the real world of London.4) Peter Pevensie, the children's father, and also King Edmund's uncle, journeys to Narnia with Edmund and Lucy to bring back Prince Caspian and all the lost Lords of Narnia.5) He needs to protect the children from the evil Uncle Miraz and his minions. Quotes In the second chapter, Hufflepuff and Gryffindor hide and watch as the adults escape from the lion. Then an unknown little boy named William (who later became King William the Second) asks for the adults to come back. The two Houses then follow the adults' advice and then go back into the lion's den. Edmund and Lucy Pevensie are the children of Peter Pevensie and Queen Susan of Narnia who are traveling to the fictional land of Narnia after their father, who is their king, is made King Edmund's uncle in the real world. These are the children's first trip into Narnia. Edmund and Lucy have known each other from their real world days in London, but they do not know each other in the fictional world of Narnia. When they get to Narnia, they are separated and have to find each other in this world. Edmund and Lucy meet each other when they go looking for their father. When they get to each other they are shocked to learn they are related. The prince regent, Prince Caspian, is the nephew of King Miraz, a usurper to the throne, and a feared antagonist of Caspian's father, King Peter. Caspian must keep his identity secret to stay alive and to win back his father's throne. He is aided by the children from Narnia. When King Miraz has him captive he offers him the choice between the two swords he has in his possession. Caspian must choose between the sword of his father or the sword of his uncle. Caspian chooses the sword of his father, effectively taking back his throne. In the last chapter, King Edmund and Prince Caspian have had an adventure with wolves, hags, and witches and they find that they have been banished to Narnia again. Caspian and Edmund return to the Narnia world with a gigantic bow and arrows 82157476af
